

Foundations of School Law Graduate Course/Seminar

Saturday September 29, 2018

This one day seminar is designed for classroom teachers interested in learning how the American legal system affects the care and instruction of students in today's schools. We live in a litigious society and teachers need an understanding of laws that govern the operation and conduct of schools. Teachers have rights and obligations under the law as do students. Teachers need current information on laws so that sound and legally defensible decisions can be made.

The seminar will explore a variety of law related topics that directly impact the lives of teachers and students, including: sources of law, the system of courts, religion in schools, individuals with disabilities, and search & seizure. Additional topics will be covered on-line for teachers who chose to enroll in the graduate course.

The presenter is Dr. Frank Bouknight who will use his extensive experience as a teacher and administrator to share his knowledge of school law. Dr. Bouknight teaches school law courses at several colleges including the College of Charleston, Charleston Southern University, College of Saint Rose in New York, and Carlow University in Pennsylvania.
